

SoCal Summit on — BLACK MASCULINITY

Through artistic expression this daylong symposium will facilitate a community dialogue on black masculinity, particularly its depiction in media arts in juxtaposition with lived experience. The summit features a screening of John Singleton's critically acclaimed Boyz N the Hood (1991), followed by an audience-centered talkback with special guests. Invited artists, scholars, and Los Angeles community citizens will contribute to a number of provocative panel discussions that include facilitator-led breakout sessions, in addition to a storyslam and spoken word and dance performances. Special guests include Boyz's producer Steve Nicolaidis, spoken word artist Javon Johnson, krump pioneers Marquisa "Miss Prissy" Gardner and Chris "Worm" Lewis, producer-writer Aaron Lindsey, and many more. The summit is designed to encourage participants to confront core questions about what it means to be human and to develop a deepened understanding of the value of fellow citizens and the gift of their stories.
